Since Academic Solutions began tutoring students in East Cobb in 1993, there have been many changes within the school system, both locally and on the state level. The changes include the addition of the CRCT, a complete overhaul of the math curriculum, a restructuring of how Target students are identified and the elimination of the regular education diploma. Over the past 18 years, parents have relied on Academic Solutions to help navigate a changing educational system.

Academic Solutions has used its expertise in methods and instruction to help students succeed in an increasingly competitive academic environment. Students receive tutoring based on school curriculum and are given the skills and tools to reach and exceed their academic goals. Academic Solutions provides help for the struggling student as well as the one who naturally excels. Services range from reading, math and writing assistance, CRCT preparation, eighth grade placement testing to aid in high school course selection and ACT/SAT prep.

Your Elementary School Experts Your child's chance for a strong foundation

Is the CogAT an I.Q. test? When does the CRCT count? Should my child have an IEP? Is my child ready for middle school?

The list of concerns for parents of elementary students can be overwhelming. "From years of working with elementary students who both excel and struggle, and from meeting with school counselors, teachers and administrators, we can answer these questions and provide a clear and individual plan to help your elementary child feel confident and ready for the next grade," said owner Robert Hoyer. Each child is tutored based on his or her particular academic need, whether that means a stronger phonetic foundation, better reading comprehension or increased math or writing skills.

Masters of Middle School To accelerate or not to accelerate, that is the question!

Can my child handle accelerated classes? How do these classes help prepare students for high school? What tests and reports are used for high school placement? How can I be sure my child is not overwhelmed by too much work in middle school?

In addition to everything else that goes on in middle school, it is truly the last chance your child has to develop grade-saving study habits and skills. Just as scary as a child who has to work constantly to make the grade, is the one who doesn't have to work at all. Many of these "natural students" show up to high school (placed into honors level classes) completely unprepared for the volume of studying required.

"At Academic Solutions, we can teach your child to manage the work load in middle school and test your child's skills in the middle of eighth grade to help guide you to the most appropriate course load in high school. It is a great way to start out strong in ninth grade," said owner Jennifer Hoyer.

Helpers for High school Where preparation meets success.

What classes should my child take? How many AP classes are needed for college? Is it better to have a "B" in an AP course or an "A" in a regular course? What GPA will my child need to go to a good college? What is a good college? Which is better for my child, the SAT or the ACT?

"Having taught at the university level and having completed the high school-to-college transition with thousands of kids, we are here to help your child succeed. From teaching 9th graders to study more effectively, to raising SAT scores over 200 points, to helping our high performing SAT students gain even higher scores to attain tuition assistance, every high school student can benefit from our services," said Robert.

All students are different and have different needs, but at Academic Solutions the one thing they have in common is success! "We make sure that every child we tutor not only improves his or her skill base but also benefits academically from our years of experience. By building relationships with families and strengthening academic foundations, we can ensure that we build the right tutoring program for each child we meet," said Jennifer.
